The DU Excellence System and ACES100

Career Services plays an important role in the Career Investigative Assignment (CIA)

Exploring careers is important, but finding the right one for you can be tricky. Employers are now expecting career- and self-development as a skill produced throughout your time in college. Career-ready individuals are a coveted candidate type all their own.

Go to davenport.pathwayu.com to create an account. Then you can take four assessments to help pair you with possible jobs and career paths.

Looking for more? Schedule an appointment with your career coach, and ask about taking the Strong Interest Inventory: davenport.joinhandshake.com/appointments.

You will see this symbol throughout the Career Services Guide.

These pages have content directly related to information students will need to reference during the ACES100 course.

In addition, we offer:

- Résumé and cover letter reviews
- Mock interviews/interview preparation
- Job search coaching
- Career fairs and other events
- And MUCH MORE!

The DU Excellence System: Why employers care and what they seek in candidates

Your DU courses, faculty and staff will holistically help you develop a successful skill set that employers demand. Focus on these areas throughout your time in college. The National Association of Colleges and Employers (NACE) releases the top skills employers seek. See the list below and notice the correlation.

DU Excellence System Competencies

- Analysis and problem-solving
- Civic and social responsibility
- Critical and creative thinking
- Ethical reasoning and action
- Global and intercultural competence
- Information and technology proficiency
- Leadership and teamwork
- Professional communication
- Written communication

NACE Career Readiness Competencies

- Critical thinking
- Career and self-development
- Equity and inclusion
- Professionalism
- Technology
- Leadership
- Teamwork
- Communication

NACE also identifies “career and self-development” as a new trending competency. This makes working with Career Services early and often of utmost importance.
